TEXAS.

By the arrival of the steamship Mexico we have received Texas papers to the 22d inst., inclusive.

From the election returns received, the Houston Telegraph sums up the Democratic majority, in sixty-two counties, at 9,849.

A fire broke out in Galveston on the night of the 21st, which destroyed the cooper shop of Mr. J. Dickson, on Mechanic street; the steam machinery of Capt. Thompson, adjoining, and the bakery and grocery of Denois & Co. Loss, $5,000.

Mr. John Crenshaw, of Washington county, while engaged in erecting a chimney on his premises, fell from the scaffold, breaking his back, which afterwards proved fatal.

We learn, says the Galveston News, from Major Burke, who passed through our city on his way to New Orleans, on Thursday last, that about twelve miles of the San Antonio and Mexican Gulf Railroad is now graded, and the schooner Sweetly-six, laden with cross-ties, had arrived at Port Lavaca. The speedy loading of this road is now considered beyond a doubt.

RAILROAD EXTENSION.—The people of the healthy and populous county of Washington seem determined to connect themselves with Houston by railroad. We see by the Ranger that the committee for the purpose is fully organized. Turner Jackson has been elected President, John P. Key, Treasurer, and Joseph Wallis, Secretary. Chief Justice C. Robert is agent to receive subscriptions. An engineer is engaged to survey the route to the nearest depot to Brenham. The directors, by-laws, &c., of Stamps, R. K. Peebles, W. M. Secker, J. W. McDade, J. Wallis, J. W. Browning, A. Upshaw, H. Garret, T. J. Jackson, J. J. Allcorn, H. C. McIntyre, J. P. Key, W. M. Rice, W. R. Baker, C. Ennis, H. H. Allen, and J. D. Giddings.

The Telegraph mentioned the arrival, a few days since, of a lot of Texas flour in Houston. Every bag has been sold at $7 per hundred, and the market is now open for any quantity.

It brings a better price than St. Louis extra, and those that have used it will have no other.

AGONY. The Houston Telegraph states that whilst several gentlemen were passing over the railroad to Richmond, on their way to that place, last Friday night, in a hand car, one of them, Dr. J. M. Hay, of Houston, was badly injured. It seems that the negroes, who were turning the wheel, became tired; Dr. H. attempted to relieve them, when his coat was caught in the cranks, and he was drawn over, turning a complete somerset, and broken one of his arms in three places. He is, however, now in a fair way for recovery.

QUICK TIME.—The ship H. B. Travis, Capt. Doty, Boss, arrived off the bar on the 19th inst., making the run from New York to Galveston in 19 days. She brings a large cargo to various consignees, and a railroad passenger on deck. Agents, Messrs. Wm. Heally & Co.

Louisiana Items.

The Bellevaux Minerva of Saturday says:

Our town has again been the theatre of another awful conflagration, which broke out in West Lisle, on Tuesday evening last, at five minutes to eight o'clock, in the cooper shop of Mr. Thomas McGuire, on Church street. The fire was the work of incendiaries, three of whom some male and two females, and all now confined in the calaboose. There were six or eight buildings destroyed, owned by Mr. J. R. Van Lew, Mrs. C. L. Bonnaire and O. Conlon. No insurance.

The Houma Creek has the following:

On Thursday night the dwelling of Mrs. Bonsett, in this place, was entirely consumed by fire. Nothing was saved except the clothing the inmates had on. Mrs. S. is a widow, with a large family, and is left completely destitute by this calamity. The hand-bills request will please take notice.

We take the following from the Shreveport Gazette:

UNFORTUNATE OCCURRENCE.—On Sunday last, between 7 and 8 o'clock, an affray occurred between one Valentine Robbeth and a negro named Mariel, aged about fifteen years, which resulted in the death of Robbeth. There has been no arrest or examination in the matter being left to the action of the grand jury, which is now in session. The facts, so far as we can ascertain them, are that the boy Mariel, on going home for dinner, was met at the door by Robbeth, who, without any provocation, knocked him down with a stick, and proceeded to administer a severe chastisement. The boy resisted, and, in the struggle, underneath Robbien, he drew his pocket knife, and, reaching over, cut him in the groin, the blade penetrating the thigh and severing the cords. After being cut, Robbeth released the boy and went to his house, where he died on Monday night. A post mortem examination was held by Drs. Cook, Allen and Gray.

The parties were Germans. Robbien, who had been for some time in the American House, stood near the door to the jewel. The universal opinion is that it was clearly a case of self-defence.

There are incendiaries at work in Natchitoches. The Chronicle of that town says:

On yesterday morning about three o'clock, the gin-house was in flames on the plantation of Mr. Wylie Wallace, about two miles from this city, which with all the contents of the building, consisting of upwards of one hundred bales of cotton, the property of three planters, viz: the dwelling house of Mr. Wallace, was entirely consumed by the fire and he and his family were left with their lives.

The Natchitoches Advocate narrates the subjoined exciting occurrence:

A swift sailess to which we cannot give any reason, has been performing the melancholy office of undertaker in the plantation of Mr. W. P. Mathews, for the last three days. Mr. Mathews' negro, aged about three years, was left in the woods near its father's residence, on Monday last, and was found dead and partly devoured by hogs, on Tuesday, and perished with the cold. It appears that Mr. Martin had gone to Mr. Jones' place, on a visit, on some business, and in the meantime after he left, the child went in search of him and got lost. He was not missed by the family, when it was supposed he had wandered off into the woods. Diligent search was made on Monday night and Tuesday morning, but they did not find it until found by the hogs, no doubt, in the dark. Thus perished, in the midst and the inclemency of the weather, a child of tender years, and one which Mr. Martin had gone to Mr. Jones' place to see, in order to transact
