imit at $100,000, which was finally changed to $100,000. After quoting from the debates, the Court says:

"The debates plainly evidence the fact that the convention thought the revenue of the State wand be equal to its expenditures; but, as some doubts existed upon this point, it was proposed to silvow a margin of three bundred thousand deblars over and above the revenue; if this should prove to be insufficient, then, the constitutional limit has also the revenue; if the should prove to be insufficient, then, the constitutional limit has also been expensed to the power of taxation and propertation returned to the people, who in ght determine, through the medium chan election, for or against appropriations. The Court goes on to state that the constitution was formed mainly of men "fresh in the States had failen," (many of khem from the States and the states, to pay the interest on the debts so improvededly contracted, had the effect to draw capital and population from their shorts. as inhabitants and this is the first case properly involving the principle decided. The Placer Times differs with the Caop, for, after reading the second with care, it says: "The arguments of the Courl appear to us irressatible." As to why the spatter has never been desided before, the Court says: a store shear.

Lines on Woman To be read alternately, the first and see nd, or the first and third, as it may suit the aste or sentiment of the reader: The bliss of him no tongue can tell
Who in a woman doth confide;
Who with a woman scorns to dwell,
Unnumbered svils will betide. They fill each leisurably day
With Joy and innocent de ight;
With sheerless gloom and misery
Are none possessed while in their sight

They make the dreary path of life A planmat journey strewn with flowers; A dreary scene of peaceful strife They quickly change with matchiese power. Domestic joy will fast decay.
Where female influence is unknown;
Where e'er a woman holds her away.
A mas is in perfection abows. She's never failing to display Truth in its netice loveliness. A heart inclined to butchery, A woman never did possess.
