SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 16.

THE WAY TO PREVENT CRIME

The execution in Baltimore of four murderers—all of them young men—furnishes some of best subjects for the pen of the preacher upon the slightest provocation; who improves such opportunities of addressing salutary and impressive words of warning to parents and guardians. These youths, says the Baltimore American, are plastic in your hands, and you can mould them into any shape you will. Your sons want no higher example than yours; they recognize no higher authority than yours. If you teach them by precept, and scriptures that the groggery is a proper place to frequent; that a pistol is an indispensable article of dress; that human life is a thing of little value; that human laws were made to be evaded, and divine laws were made to be defied; if you tell them by your words and acts that it is unmanly to dread the penalties threatened by transgression; that the retributions of another world are myths and fables—it may be that God in his vengeance will allow them to believe.

Putting aside the questionable theology of divine vengeance, the homily of the American is appropriate and well-timed. It refers very properly to one of the most prominent and spreading errors of social life and education. Parents are apt to wonder at and deplore the depravity of their children, forgetting that they set an example which the nimble apprehension and strong imitative powers of youth are but too much disposed to follow. The father who habitually indulges in profane swearing, drinking or gaming; who unhesitatingly exhibits vile and vindictive propensities upon the slightest provocation; who never seeks to restrain the violence of his temper; who is not ashamed to display mal-ice, uncharitableness, wrath, resentment, a contentious and quarrelsome spirit, and who thus daily places before his children's eyes the infirmity of his own nature, and the utter absence of self-control, has no earthly right to complain, if, when his offspring become men, they manifest the same detestable qualities, resort to the logic of the bowie-knife and revolver whenever their exaggerated susceptibility is aroused; frequent the haunts of dissipation and vice; spurn alike moral, civil and religious restraints, and either become inmates of the State prison, or terminate their disreputable career on the scaffold. No truth is more undeniable, and none more portentous and paramount than that the character of children is usually moulded and modelled upon that of their parents.

It may be said that there are good men who have given birth to bad children; that sometimes perverse dispositions and inherent depravity are found in families where the parents are distinguished by many excellent qualities. These, however, are isolated cases, and do not impair the validity of the general law. We hear another excuse sometimes offered. "It is, alas! true," will an unhappy father exclaim, "that my son has turned out a profligate and irreclaimable wretch; but the fault cannot justly be ascribed to me. I never taught him to lie, to cheat, to swindle, to game, to frequent improper haunts, to keep bad company, and recklessly to indulge every impure and wicked passion." The apology in most cases is wholly devoid of foundation. The father lays the flattering unction to his soul that he is innocent of his son's crimes, because he never sought directly to rear him in defiance of human and divine law; but he forgets that sins of omission produce results as grievous as those of commission. If he never taught his son to lie, did he ever teach him the beauty and sanctity of truth? If he never inculcated the fiendish passion of revenge, did he ever seek to impress him with the noble spirit of forgiveness? If, by forbore from indiscriminately lumping him with the ethics of Pen Traven, did he ever strive to engrave on his heart the precepts of the decalogue? In short, can the parent who suffers his child to grow to manhood with no more powerful controller over the inherent evils of his nature, than that derived from the mere absence of direct incentives to vice, hold himself guiltless if the youth swerves from obligations he has never properly learned to obey? The folly of expecting any other consequence is as transparent as that of the man who should place an idiot with a lighted torch in a room filled with gunpowder, and never dream of an explosion.

The truth is that our system of training is grossly defective, and its chief imperfection consists in the absence of healthy moral teachings. If we desire that our children should become good citizens and virtuous men; that they should fear God, obey his commandments, and love their neighbor, we must not be content with negative instruction. We must teach them by constant precept, and wholesome example. We must begin early and marry not in well doing. There is no royal road to goodness any more than to knowledge. As the latter can be attained only by infinite labor, so is the former to be acquired only by persevering in habits of resolute self-government, and, resistance to the allurements of evils.

OUR MONROE FRIENDS.—A. & E. LESTER, No. 7 Exchange Place, have received No. 10 of this cheap and excellent publication. It contains the Rigoletto Bolero, Bring us the Goblet, Barcarolle for the Piano, and the Rose Leaf Schottisch.

The officers of the fast and elegant Louisville and New Orleans packet James Montgomery, Captain Jas. B. Russell, have our thanks for the latest dates of Cincinnati and Louisville papers. The Montgomery leaves at 10 o'clock this morning, and we can safely assure the public, and our lady friends particularly, that they cannot travel with more agreeable evidence than are to be found on this fine boat, and certainly with no more reliable commander than Captain Russell. We speak, by the card, as we have traveled on the Montgomery.

A BLANK TRANSACTION.—A Bank Swindled out of $2000.—We learn from the Pittsburg Chronicle that the Allegheny Bank was swindled out of $2000 by a very ingenious manœuvre. It was as follows: One C. S. Williams makes his appearance in the village of New Philadelphia, Ohio, where he proposes to go into partnership with a Mr. Hull, a merchant of that place. His proposition was accepted, but Mr. H. is informed that Mr. W. has two drafts for $2000 each, which he must get cashed. Mr. Hull being about to visit Pittsburg, invites his new partner to accompany him and get the draft cashed in that city. Mr. Williams goes willingly through the agency of Mr. H. is introduced to the Allegheny Bank by influential persons; gets a draft for $2000 cashed, and has not been heard from since.

HON. L. V. BEDIER.—The Baton Rouge Gazette says: The friends of this gentleman will be gratified to learn that he is fast recovering from the serious injuries he sustained by the explosion of the ill-fated steamer Princess.

IS LAURA BELL IRRESPONSIBLE?—A jury in Geneva, New York, have decided that the allegation. The Excise Commissioner sued A. W. Brewer for selling lager beer without a license. He admitted the fact, but alleged the non-intoxicating qualities of the beer. In support of this, witnesses swore to drinking one hundred glasses a day without becoming drunk. Others testified differently. Mr. Brewer, to test the matter, purchased a quantity of beer and had it analyzed. The results of that chemical process showed that two quarts of that lager produced about one-half pint of spurious whisky. Those witnesses who drank one hundred glasses in a day would take down about six ounces of whisky with it; ergo, he should think, to make a human being intoxicated. The jury rendered a verdict of $100.

A NEW SOURCE OF REVENUE.—We are informed by a gentleman who arrived in the last Havana steamer that a recent order for exacting a stamp tax on accounts books, promulgated by the Governor General, has a effecting a strong feeling of dissatisfaction. By this order, every leaf of every blank book for business purposes must be stamped; otherwise, no claim of indebtedness based upon such books is collectable. For each of the first and last leaves, 62 are exacted; and for every other leaf, 2c. This new mode of producing revenue was regarded with extreme distaste, and many contrivances were resorted to to avoid payment.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Never was the French better translated into plain reason than in the story which is told of the Count de Lauzun, who, receiving a card of invitation to dinner from some much sawyer folks than themselves. At the bottom of the card was the then new R.S.V.P. This fly annoy the public, and our lady friends particularly, that they cannot travel with more agreeable evidence than are to be found on this fine boat, and certainly with no more reliable commander than Captain Russell. We speak, by the card, as we have traveled on the Montgomery.

Bound Apprentices to Young Men.—Keep good company or none. Never be idle. If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets, if you have any. When you speak to a person, look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the very sinews of virtue. Good character is above all other thing else. Your character cannot be easily injured, except by your own acts. If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that no one will believe him. Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors. Ever live (unfortunate exceptions) within your income. When you retire to bed, think over what you have been doing during the day. Make no haste to be rich, if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency, with tranquility of mind. Never play at any game of chance. Avoid temptation, though you fear you may not withstand it. Earn money before you spend it. Never run into debt, unless you see a way to pay it. Do not marry until you are able to support a wife. Never speak evil of any. Be just before you are generous. Keep yourself modest; if you would be happy. Have great care not to speak that you may mend what you are old. Read over the above maxims at least once a week.

TEXAS.

By the arrival of the steamship Mexico we have received Texas papers to the 12th instant. We copy the following from our exchanges:

The San Antonio and Mexican Gulf railroad, with a franchise and chartered privileges, and a completed road for five miles west of the Alamo, was sold at the door of the court house in that city on the 5th instant, for $31,000 cash. The sale was made under a decree of the court, and the purchasers were J. S. Theobald, C. A. Wheeler, E. St. Pulliam and others. The bids on the 4th went up to only $20,000, when the sale being adjourned to the next day, it was made as above. We learn that bonds had been given at the sale of prior lien upon the road, the bonds and franchises held by H. H. Reynolds & Co., to the amount of over $100,000, and that judicial proceedings would be instituted to enforce said lien over all other liens or claims.

We understand the suits was made by virtue of the same law under which the South-ern Pacific railroad was sold last year.

The Texas Ranger says that some of their garrison have been visited by the bands of destructive insects, in the shape of a striped bug, which seem to destroy every thing they touch, in the shape of growing vegetation.

Grand Encampment and Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows are to meet in LaGrange on the 25th inst. One great object of this meeting is to celebrate, with appropriate ceremonies, Tuesday, the 26th day of April, which is the fortieth anniversary of the introduction of the Order into the United States, as a national festival of the Order.

The Galveston Civen says:

Coroner Friedenman held an inquest yesterday on the body of a man named Benjamin Talterman, who was found in a dying condition, on the sidewalk near the theatre, and shortly after expired. It appears that he had been drinking, and getting out of his room (which he fell into the street into the street, injuring himself internally.

BRAZORIA.—The Democrat learns that the Senator Bell is not to return to the House again this session.

The Democrat thinks that the gin-house of Dr. H. M. Collins, of that county, was burned to the ground on the night of the 29th ult., and with it 100 bales of cotton. It was not known how the fire originated.

(From the Life of Rockford.)

A Real Magician.

Mr. Rockford, of Fordhill, once related that on Penn he casually fell in with a real magician, or, at least, a very old man, with whose appearance and manner he became much struck. The man appeared a mysterious character, and advanced in years. They used to talk together upon the subjects of magic and astrology, until the stranger seeing the interest Mr. Rockford took in such topics, in which he himself seemed to take no less, he told him that if he would call upon him, he would exhibit to him one of the most extraordinary things in the art. Mr. Rockford considered. The address he gave was in an obscure part of Paris. Curiosity and fancy for such things overpowered every other consideration, though the man was only a cheiromancer. Mr. Rockford, however, determined to go, and went accordingly. The approach to the dwelling indicated was through an old timber yard, which appeared to have remained long in the same state, as it was fast falling to pieces. The place appeared to be held in one of these castles is worth over eighty dollars, and if wrought into any common form, even less elaborated than the present one, would be worth over two hundred dollars. The cheiromancer, who is a rossily of regal magnificence, were manufactured at a cost of eighteen hundred dollars, and were originally exhibited in the Crystal Palace at the great Exhibition; they subsequently, being too costly to find a purchaser, came into the possession of the present owners, fortunately to find an appropriate disposition, by being placed in the possession of a young magician, the magical wonder and chess champion of the age.

In addition to the pieces, there is being prepared a chess-board, the squares of which will be designated by ebony and pearl. Upon the four sides will be golden shields, containing the names of the donors, and appropriate mottoes. The whole forming together a magnificent present, such as never fell into the hands of princes or kings. Appropriate, indeed, for our great American sovereign.

Latest from the Kansas Pimes.

LEAVENWORTH, April 11.—Mr. Brookfield, formerly of Boulder City, Colorado City, writes from Boulder City, under date March 6th, to the effect that discoveries of course gold have been made in the mountains which pay as high as five dollars to the hand with rockers, and that nearly every day adds to the fortunes of the Pike's Peak country.

The tenor of Mr. Brookfield's statements is eminently satisfactory, and the authority is regarded as conclusive.

LATER.—Later private advices received today of most ample evidence of the discovery of rich placers in the mountains. Several statements from different sources are nearly identical, and corroborate the finding of paying deposits of shot gold at Boulder City, and through a section of country thirty miles in extent. Much excitement existed at Denver City and along Cherry Creek in consequence of these discoveries. All the reports from the mines are more sanguine than ever and entirely meet the public belief. So far as developed from parties who went from this city, and partial reliance is placed in their statements.

A SCENE BETWEEN HEENAN AND MORRISSEY.

A sparring exhibition was gotten up at Huyin's Theatre, in New York, on the evening of the 8th inst., and a friendly display of the science of pummeling between the heroes of Long Point formed a feature of the programme. The Express says:

Just as the sports were about to commence, Prof. Ordinary advanced to the footlights and said, if Mr. Heenan was present he would thank him to step to the back; whereupon the fashionable Boy crossed over the stage to the rear, amidst the loud plaudits of the spectators. On getting into the room where the pugilists were to prepare themselves, he found Morrissey, whereupon the former ambassadors shook hands, and mutually expressed satisfaction at once more meeting on friendly terms.

The Express thus describes the minute encounter between them after having "buried the hatchet:"

The two great guns of the evening, Morrissey and Heenan, appeared, hand in hand, amidst the wildest excitement. Cheer upon cheer reverberated through the building, and it was some time before order could be restored. Having shaken hands, they sat to, and fought eight rounds. The first touch was given by Morrissey in the second round; but it was so slight as hardly to be worth considering as a blow. In the third round, Heenan gave his antagonist a smart blow in the face. In the fourth round, both of the combatants got in a blow simultaneously in the face. Morrissey made a slip at the close, and fell—not from a blow, but from the slipperiness of the floor. He was courteously raised by Heenan. In the fifth round, Heenan got into Morrissey's cheek, which the latter repaid in the next with a well-applied douse on the "nob." The seventh, Morrissey peppered Heenan's "mug," a compliment which was returned on his "potato trap." The eighth round showed both antagonists about equal. Much science was displayed on both sides; but Heenan seemed to follow the satisfaction he was said to have practised at the Ads in Canada, taking Shakspeare as his monitor—

"If there does when 'tis done,
Then there well there done quickly."

Each round was loudly applauded, and at the conclusion of the ninth the plaudits of the multitude fairly shook the building.

The moral and intellectual of it, which are written at no "chairmanship to grace," may be summed up in the words, "Don't you do it." But in the words of the song, nothing is the paradise of patience. If by the particular attention of city and county officers to the enforcement of the law, the Sickles trial can be prevented from becoming a farce, it will be a matter for congratulation. The evil results arising from party abuse and unhappy contemplation may be subverted by the powerful effect of "THY NAME." Laughing Philosophy is only to be found in the book of human Frailty; or, Physiological Researches." Sold by Dr. BARROW, 161 Prince street, New York. Price $3 each. Letter free. Sold also by

A GREAT REMEDY FOR FEMALES!

Hundreds of all classes have been invented, and sold purporting to be specific in the various diseases and derangements in which the delicate form of woman render her sufferings. The result of all these frauds has been to impart a hopelessness entirely to the several cures, and false views to the sufferer; but this cannot have been successful by a depression and consequent reaction greater than before. Many attempts of invalids to build themselves up by these false remedies have finally ended in destroying what little vital organization was left. But no such disastrous results have followed the use of Dr. Holland Professor, Brothers. Under its influence every nerve and muscle receives new strength and vigor, appetite and sleep return, and, finally, perfect health.
