

We take it for granted that the leading members of the two political parties now in the field are sincerely desirous that the coming election should be fair and honest by constitutional and other means. We do not believe that they can be allowed to differ in their views or objectives, or otherwise, but it must be remembered that a subscriber, and voted for, may, makes no man a greater of the subscriber.

It would be a gross violation of the principles of the constitution if the election were to be tampered with.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-citants and counter-charges is that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-fessor under a great wrong, I wish to say that it is better, all people of good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract to their fair fame, but absolutely injure to the interests of the commerce, by which the majority of our citizens are engaged.

It would be a wise course to make no promises, but to keep the peace and public order on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is

not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-

citants and counter-charges is

that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-

fessor under a great wrong, I wish to say that it is better, all people of

good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared

for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract

to their fair fame, but absolutely injure

to the interests of the commerce, by

which the majority of our citizens

are engaged.

It would be a wise course to

make no promises, but to

keep the peace and public order

on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is

not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-

citants and counter-charges is

that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-

fessor under a great wrong, I wish to say that it is better, all people of

good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared

for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract

to their fair fame, but absolutely injure

to the interests of the commerce, by

which the majority of our citizens

are engaged.

It would be a wise course to

make no promises, but to

keep the peace and public order

on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is

not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-

citants and counter-charges is

that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-

fessor under a great wrong, I wish to say that it is better, all people of

good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared

for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract

to their fair fame, but absolutely injure

to the interests of the commerce, by

which the majority of our citizens

are engaged.

It would be a wise course to

make no promises, but to

keep the peace and public order

on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is

not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-

citants and counter-charges is

that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-

fessor under a great wrong, I wish to

say that it is better, all people of

good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared

for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract

to their fair fame, but absolutely injure

to the interests of the commerce, by

which the majority of our citizens

are engaged.

It would be a wise course to

make no promises, but to

keep the peace and public order

on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is

not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-

citants and counter-charges is

that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-

fessor under a great wrong, I wish to

say that it is better, all people of

good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared

for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract

to their fair fame, but absolutely injure

to the interests of the commerce, by

which the majority of our citizens

are engaged.

It would be a wise course to

make no promises, but to

keep the peace and public order

on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is

not abandoned.

The inevitable result of banding ex-

citants and counter-charges is

that the election will be a farce.

If you do not want to converse any more,

I will remark to these reporting gentlemen

that I believe it to be perfectly justifiable,

and not the part of an ordinary or ruf-

fessor under a great wrong, I wish to

say that it is better, all people of

good will, to be prepared for the worst.

It must come up, and we are prepared

for it, and the sooner the better.

Such a course would not merely distract

to their fair fame, but absolutely injure

to the interests of the commerce, by

which the majority of our citizens

are engaged.

It would be a wise course to

make no promises, but to

keep the peace and public order

on the day of the election.

Nothing, however, can be done to restrain

the election from being delayed.

The present policy of the government is not abandoned.