THE DAILY BEE.

C. G. RICHARDSON, Editor and Proprietor.
OFFICE, 4 CAMP STREET, 4 DOORS FROM CANAL.

NEW ORLEANS:
MONDAY MORNING, AUGUST 13, 1860.

SUBSCRIPTION BY THE WEEK.

The carriers will be authorized to deliver the DAILY BEE to subscribers for one week, payable to the carriers themselves, at the rate of 25 cents a week.

American Union Vote Key.

Table of Votes, the 4th, by the Middle, or 19th column, 4th, on Sunday, counts, under Presidential years, Table given below, 1st, 13 cents, M., at the Telegraph Office, corner, judgments, bond, &c. the subscription.

ENGLAND ARMING.

Lord Derby says we shall threaten to double the estimates of the commission report on the public defenses of Great Britain submitted to the Commission to which the subject had been referred. The establishment of a completely new extensive system of fortifications especially in those places where arms and ammunition are stored, on which thousand the avenues leading to the city of London, was the chief recommendation of the Commission; and to effect this object appropriations to the amount of £9,000,000 sterling to the surrender to some sixty millions of dollars.

All a Breckinridge and Lane ratification meeting in Madison, Ga., a few nights since, Col. John G. McHenry had the manliness to acknowledge the soundness and worth of the Union candidates. The Madison Visiter—a neutral paper—says:

He complimented Mr. Bell as a sound, honest man, and Mr. Everett as a pure, high-toned, noble gentleman, whose sense of justice towered above the storm of fanaticism, which has distracted the country and jeoparded the rights of our section of the Union.

This, remarks the Augusta Chronicle, is very different from the common herd of Breckinridge slang-wangers, who are accustomed, from party bitterness or from ignorance, to denounce John Bell, a large slaveholder, as "unsound," and Mr. Everett, one of the purest men of the Republic, as a vile Abolitionist. Common sense, as well as vile Abolitionist. Common sense, as well as vile Abolitionist. Common sense, as well as