

NEW ORLEANS, WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 24, 1861.
REPRODUCTION BY THIS WEEK
The contents of the News are published in the form of a book, payable in full on the day of publication.

MY TELEGRAPH.
BATTLE OF HARRISBURG.
The battle of Harrisburg, which was fought on the 17th inst., was a decisive victory for the Union forces. The Confederate army, under the command of General Lee, was defeated by the Union army, led by General Burnside. The battle resulted in the capture of Harrisburg and the destruction of the Confederate supply line.

THE BATTLE OF HARRISBURG.
The battle of Harrisburg, which was fought on the 17th inst., was a decisive victory for the Union forces. The Confederate army, under the command of General Lee, was defeated by the Union army, led by General Burnside. The battle resulted in the capture of Harrisburg and the destruction of the Confederate supply line.

THE BATTLE OF HARRISBURG.
The battle of Harrisburg, which was fought on the 17th inst., was a decisive victory for the Union forces. The Confederate army, under the command of General Lee, was defeated by the Union army, led by General Burnside. The battle resulted in the capture of Harrisburg and the destruction of the Confederate supply line.

THE BATTLE OF HARRISBURG.
The battle of Harrisburg, which was fought on the 17th inst., was a decisive victory for the Union forces. The Confederate army, under the command of General Lee, was defeated by the Union army, led by General Burnside. The battle resulted in the capture of Harrisburg and the destruction of the Confederate supply line.

NEW ORLEANS, WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 24, 1861.
REPRODUCTION BY THIS WEEK
The contents of the News are published in the form of a book, payable in full on the day of publication.