The New Orleans Bee.

OFFICE 73 CHARTRES STREET. NEW ORLEANS, FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 2, 1866. Vol. XXVII—New Series. Vol. XVII—Whole—13,719.

THE NEW ORLEANS BEE

[illegible] DAILY newspaper, [illegible]

No. 73 Chartres street,

NEW ORLEANS:

FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 2, 1866.

THE MATRONALITY.—It is gratifying to observe that there is not likely to be any lack of worthy and popular gentlemen presented to the people of this city for the office of Mayor at the approaching municipal election on the 14th instant. The name of ex-Mayor John T. Monroe, whose term was acknowledged unsurpassed for brevity and short in 1862 by Gen. Butler, is announced for the office in our columns this morning, without reference to party nomina- [illegible] of Mr. J. O. Nixon also appears in connection with the office, as a solicitor of the suffrages at the hands of the Democratic party. In addition, a very earnest call is made upon Judge Henry D. Bguiss by a number of our leading and substantial citizens, soliciting the use of his name for the same office at the coming election. The reply of Judge Eguiss is not yet announced.

THE GREAT CIRCUS.—The great circus attracted the exhibition at the corner of St. Joseph and Carondelet streets will open its season this afternoon. The Orpleon Arabians of Mobile [illegible] from its proprietors, Scott, Rosston and Mahoney, $2000, and they gave $1200 to the families in Memphis. We understand the company to contribute from their receipts to the Orphan Asylums in this city as they have elsewhere.

RAYMOND'S WORKS.—Delicious, refreshing, sparkling, preservative, indispensable, exquisite, are the terms applied to the famous Soandini, in the [illegible] of households every day. And why? Simply because all the virtues nondescriptly [illegible] this delicious, actually natural is [illegible] preparation.

ARRIVAL THIS PRESIDENT TO THE WALL.

We quote [illegible] years ago from an [illegible] Sherman orator, Frederic Bohlegel, a passage which at this moment may be repeated with [illegible] emphasis, in view of political developments the North since the veto of the President's Bureau bill :—

"These extraordinary and violent measures, [illegible] put in execution, so easily be- [illegible] whether they spring from the principle of liberty or from the principle of its destruction, has invariably characterized by the impossibility of arresting their progress. Crime, [illegible] excited, assumes the character of an [illegible] power; it no longer governs alone in the will of the tyrant whether he shall be a tyrant or not; an invisible force, like an inexorable fate, hurries him forward."

It is time most clear that the Radical faction in Congress is incapable of arresting its headlong career. It acknowledges no law but the law of its own momentum. Nothing short of the strongest resistance can defeat its desperate struggle for absolute political supremacy—a supremacy which, from its very nature, could only give birth to a [illegible] country, that would only tend to make revolution chronic.

THE VETOES in both branches of Congress exhibit a large majority to deadly opposition to the President, yielding a blind obedience to leaders who, with that kind of hatred which never [illegible] and is afraid to spare, prays to [illegible] ends. In the House they are shown to [illegible] less than from 104 to 105, against [illegible] 60. This, supposing the same proportional [illegible] in subsequent divisions in which there or all of the thirty odd absent or non-voting members should participate, would [illegible] always to carry a measure over the veto of the President by a two-thirds vote. In the Senate, taking the vote on the recommittal of Freedmen's Bureau bill as a test, they are [illegible] than the two-thirds of all the Senators, but [illegible] than two-thirds of those who voted on the bill."

The minds of this preponderance in Congress, if it [illegible] not always outweigh the President's [illegible] to be wielded so as to put an absolute [illegible] to all hopes of restoration. This is plainly [illegible] in the resolution of Mr. Bingham, [illegible] to submit first any of the States that have taken [illegible] until Congress shall have declared such representation; and in three resolutions asserting it to be the duty of Congress to provide for the reorganization of civil governments which [illegible] States had lost by rebellion.

By these declarations the Radical majority claim for Congress the complete control of the whole question of reorganization: they refuse to recognize any reorganizing measures in the Southern States, any movement whatever to bring them [illegible] back into constitutional relations with the Union, which do not originate with Congress. A denial of the existence of any [illegible] constitution in the same fact of his taking the initiative in the work of restoration, and daring to take it on [illegible] of his own, instead of waiting for the [illegible] decrees to fall [illegible] him with a [illegible] of progression, and instead of submitting the practical question as to what keeping to the ancient and tried [illegible] of supervision cannot just as they might see fit and proper. They would trust no better President than Andrew Johnson if he were an Executive automaton watched by Congressional machinery, or if he were even frightful monster, insidious, heathen, but with tremendous arms as ruthless as death, carrying in the record of blood, and [illegible] misery by the instinct of obedience to their orders.

But the President has a head and a heart which give the Radical leaders increasing trouble. He is not their man simply because he is a man, and not an automaton or a spooner. Mr. Seward says, "the judgment of leaders are by [illegible] with him, in opinion." There is much meaning to be seen in these words produced from Mr. Seward intended. It is not to be understood that these leaders are satisfied that to agree with the President in the matter of [illegible] him as a leader having an [illegible] of [illegible] doing what he is, to [illegible] to [illegible] so much so that Mr. Sherman reminds his small stock of history to find examples suggestive of the capital punishment of obnoxious Chief Magistrates by Lynch [illegible] bodies, and Mr. Wendell Phillips, echoing the [illegible] suggestion, plainly remarks that, if he had [illegible] was no objection to the way of [illegible] purpose. It is not advisable to be too [illegible] Still not distant from the dramatic effect of these words to know that they are a [illegible] translation from language which, uttered by the St. Just, the Marat, the Robespierre of the French Convention, meant something to the guillotine.

That the President himself is aware of the [illegible] desire of the Radical leaders to get rid of him as an obstacle, since they can not use him as an instrument, is sufficiently indicated in his recent speech in Washington. But how significant this [illegible] utterly repudiating the [illegible] the problem that perplexes [illegible] At least one of the thoughts that have [illegible] away the spirit of their dictated in this [illegible] was [illegible] S. Hillyer, formerly of [illegible] staff, in a speech before a meeting of military men, and which the National Intelligencer has deemed substantially important to be published :

"There was a conspiracy now hatching at Washington to kill the President. The plot against him was, that Tennessee was not a loyal State, and that Andrew Johnson, being a Tennessean, was implicated in the rebellion. Secession would pass Congress declaring him a usurper, and all the horrors of the French revolution would follow. We must oppose this conspiracy and defend it, thereby showing the friends of the Union, both in and out of Congress, that those who fought for its [illegible] will still recognize the stars upon its banner."

The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican alludes no doubt to the same [illegible] when he says :

"The rumor of a conspiracy in Congress to [illegible] the President is revived, and is attracting [illegible] attention here, and in other well [illegible] circles, and it cannot be denied that [illegible] leaders in a conservative [illegible] of the Union, which grows daily more bitter and defiant, gives countenance to the charge. Mr. Williams of Pennsylvania, in his malignant [illegible] on the President in the House of Representatives, on Saturday last, asserted, with [illegible] that Tennessee, by her act of secession, [illegible] lost her territory, which [illegible] Mr. Johnson, and [illegible] office of President.

"[illegible] portion of the Radical leaders [illegible] to [illegible] They aim to make the [illegible] by [illegible] him as an [illegible] [illegible] of whom [illegible] who were so [illegible] the Union. They are [illegible] he is no further identified [illegible] of such that that cause is [illegible] [illegible] sentiments of people and the restoration of the Union. They hope by degrees to [illegible] to the popular view of the North as [illegible] [illegible] sentiments, sentiments and [illegible] [illegible] and the leader of a second [illegible] [illegible] have already [illegible] [illegible] and the Radical journals, not [illegible] the New York Tribune, are variously [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] They refer to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the South as an [illegible] [illegible] in the eyes of loyal men [illegible] And, they, what else were the [illegible] people to do? Andrew was the head of the party to which they had [illegible] [illegible] to him they owe additional loyalty, [illegible] symbolized. While [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]