And every great ware have passed into history without producing such wide-apreed hor no ror, and indignation. Searcely any "event on record has caused each universal sorrow. The merican poem is nearly unanimous in its con its mentions and, with the exception of the or awo newpapers notorious for their vegaries, it is, has condessened the infamous deed in language far from fluttaring to the Mexican people. And not alone the press of this country, but that of alone the press of this country, but that of alone the press of this country, but that of a weep for from which we have beard, his condemned the brutal morder in the country, but that of a weep forigin country from which we have beard, his condemned the brutal morder in the country, but that of a weep forigin country from which we have beard, his condemned the brutal morder in the country, and in the country, but that of a weep forigin country from which we have beard, his condemned the brutal morder in the condect of Junez in a fairer light; we find upthing concerning the deed that does not fill the beart with horror at the barbarian cuestry and blood-thirsty spirit of the men who call the preserve Mexican Republicans. It is all the preserve of the men who call the preserve Mexican Republicans. It is impossible to admit an excuse in the supposition that Junez did not dare to spare the life of the upfortunate.
