

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Respectful Interference—One of the reports of the Council says that the other night a party of some of the most prominent citizens of the city, who were sitting in the parlors of the City Hotel, were startled by a man who entered the room, and who was dressed in a manner that would lead to the supposition that he was a member of the secret societies. He was introduced to the party by one of the gentlemen present, and he proceeded to make a long and somewhat incoherent speech, in the course of which he alluded to the various reports of the city, and particularly to the reports of the Council. He concluded by saying that he was a member of the secret societies, and that he was proud to belong to them. The party were much amused by his speech, and he was permitted to depart without any further notice.
