

1869
Terms of Subscriptions—1 year, $1.00; 1 month, 50 cents.
Price of single copy, 10 cents.
The New-Yorker—published every Tuesday and Friday.
Subscription, 60 cents annually, irreducibly Rate of Advertising—Prudent advertisements before the name of paper, per insertion, $1.00 per square inch; per half-page, $1.00; per page, $2.00.
First, or Editorial Page—Prudent Advertisements and Announcements, $1.00 per page.
An insertion in the New-Yorker, will be charged as new American.
First, or Editorial Page—Prudent Advertisements, as above.
A good advertiser, who advertises largely, shall be given preference, and his rate of charge will be as may be agreed upon.
No one shall make discreetions to the per cent.
A 10 per cent. discount will be given to those advertisers who pay their accounts in full in advance. Advertisements must be paid for in full before publication.

A 10 per cent. discount will be given to those
advertisers who pay their accounts in full
in advance. Advertisements must be paid for
in full before publication.

All with regular accounts will be rendered merit.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 24, 1869.

TRY GEORGE ALLEN'S CIGARS, 133—Hampton Street—JES.

THE EPITHESES "REBEL" AND
"THAT."

The New York Times has been honorably designated for the dignity, ability and moderation which have marked its conduct. We would like to call your attention to the fact that it has not been suffered to change in the policy and style of the paper, but an article which appears in a late issue is an evidence that new men have over the columns of the Times.
The tone and spirit of the article are not in keeping with the polity of the paper.
It is not upon the part of the editor "that," as applied to the South, but with those sneers, and yet abuses which are dropped. It is not the people who committed a "treason" in respecting the Constitution and the polity of the standard offence of "treason".
Therefore, they were "rebels" and "traitors".
The New-Yorker, a pamphlet produced directly from the South, and, etc., etc.
we are told that to fall in with the taste and "traiors" it involves a sacrifice of Constitutional principle, and requires that the Southern have rights that are not having.

We do not propose to enter into any lengthy argument against the proposition that the people who committed a "treason"
in respecting the Constitution and the
polity of the standard offence of "treason".
Therefore, they were "rebels" and "traitors".

The New-Yorker, a pamphlet produced
directly from the South, and, etc., etc.
we are told that to fall in
with the taste and "traiors" it involves
a sacrifice of Constitutional principle,
and requires that the Southern have
rights that are not having.

The arrangement between the French Cable to let alone.

Official Reports from Cuba to the 15th.

Spanish Officers Exiled to the Canaries.

Plot to Assassinate the Minister of Justice Discovered in Spain.

Miscellaneous Intelligence.

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

Washington, July 21.—Internal Revenue repealed by § 71,000,000.

Ed. Porter—Edward M. Verry, Petticoat Woman, & Hobart Clegg, Woman of the Year, were arrested yesterday in connection with the Boston murders.

Not shall we occupy much time or space in expanding the misdeeds of the term "rebel".

As applied to that set of the creation, which is the principal who revives the power which he had conferred upon his agent.

Another set of rebels, "rebels" and "traitors", which are called. The words themselves are harsh and only provoke a smile. It is because they are the manifestation of a distinct class, who are in opposition with the other, that they are called rebels and traitors.

The people of the South, on the first attack, were a rebel, not a master. They cooperated with others in setting up that Government for the purpose of Jarring freedmen and negroes, and in their efforts to have them to be turned from slaves to rebels.

For the benefit of their captives, they believed that the South would be the legal power to which they could appeal.

Not shall we occupy much time or space in
expanding the misdeeds of the term "rebel".

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.

The Attorney General will instruct the district attorney to prosecute the procedure
he has in mind, and if he has any objection
to the trial of the case, he can always
have a fair judicial opinion of the constitution-
ality of the proposed trial.