tiental money, were estimated by Alexand Hamilton at $357,473,541, while the committe Hamilton at $357,73,541, while the committee rescutified only $55,569,375.
With the design of strengthening the public credit, the present Congress have made forlarations respecting their purposes to pay our delt, similar to those made with the same design by their predecessors in Hamilton's time, respecting the revolutionary war debt. Resolution have been proposed, if not adopted, set time forth their intention to pay and denounce these who do not believe they can pay however well disposed they may be. In-little instances these declarations were significantly intentioned the state of the state o whether the perallel will be made com-plete by a like extinguishment of the debt now existing. We have come to the conclusion that our various National securities will either be-causated into a mail formula. out various National secerities will either be cuverted into a milform shape, carrying a reasonable rate of interest, or they will be re-purbated entirely when the country can on looger support the burden, and that period seems to be rapidly appreaching. All the signs of the times point to an animated discussion of the finances above all other topics which will no doubt terminate by such an adjustment as will relieve use from the terrible load under which the country is now groaning.
