Figurity Of THE EMPERS Figure The special correspondent of the Parts Fogiro writes from Constantinople that when the Empress was leaving, one of her maids was attacked with typhus fever, and that a bed was made up for her inthe saloon of the Aigle. Out the Sultan coming on board to take leave of the Empress, her Majesty apolyized for receiving him on dack, and said she could not take him to the saloon because there was an invalid there. After the Solical left the Empress went to watch by the beside of the sick servant, but just as the yacht got under weigh the Tarkish hips in other port began to fire seite. She then realed upon deck, and entreated that signals should be made to case he firing. Finding it impossible to make her wishes understood in a time by the Tarkish lies, who gave orders to put on all seeam, and get out of the noisefag soon as possible. The pore servant died shority sterward, and her body was cent subre in the Dardamelles, to be transported to Paiss.

thus describes an incident occurring at the su-topsy of Richardson:

"Doring the examination the surgeons worked unconcernedly, and three of them smoked incoesantly. They were heartless, and laughed and joked immoderately. The weight of Mr. Kichardson's brains astonia had them. His cranism was found to be unusually thick, upon which Dr. Sayre said: "McFarland most have known that Richardson had a thick ikuli, else he would have shot bim in the head."
