The absurdity of this proposition is ap-The abstractive of this proposition is apparent to every reasonable mind.

What was the object of the people of Louisians when they voted upon the amount many the control of Illinois Central Ealroad, for appreciated favors.

Tokker, the active and gentlemany General Southern Agent Louisians when they voted upon the amount to their fundamental law limiting the debt to twenty-five millions of dollars? Was it not to secure themselves against incurring obligations of any kind in excess of that amount? Was it not to prevent their law-makers from creating debt or obligation in any shape beyond the amount insmet? When the succession of the heart, all severe acute or plaint" or "Eidousness" it is unequaled. Was it not to secure them solves against incurring obligations of any kind in excess of that amount? Was if plant to prevent their law-makers from creating debt or obligation in any shape beyond the amount named? What matters it whether it be bond of the State or bonds of corporations for which the people are responsible? The only difference between the two classes of obligations is, that for the bonds of the State, the State only is responsible, while for bonds not issued by the State but only endorsed by the State, she is only responsible if the principal maker of the bonds abould fail to pay.

United States Court to recover the tax of one per cent, upon cotton purchases which they paid to revenue officers of the Federal Government, under protest. The factors having paid the tax on cotton bought from them by brokers, it is pleaded that the act did not contemplate an imposition of the same tax every time the commodify changed havie; that on cotton bought and the paid the fax it is pleaded that from them by brokers, it is pleaded that from the many brokers, it is pleaded that the act did not contemplate an imposition the same tax every time the commodity be levied once upon the same property.

In the First District Court yesterday the Grand Jury was discharged by order of Judge Abell, who, in the Rocherean burglary case, decided that the panel should have been taken from a list of voters at the election of 1870, and not from the voters at the election of 1870, and not from the voters at the election of 1870, and not from the abent which it had been taken from. As a new indictment will have to be submitted to another Grand Jury, the case was indefinited, his words and the first same than the formal Jury was remay waive objection to.
