THE ATTEMPTED REVOLUTION IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

It is doubtful if an extraordinary session was witnessed in the House of Representatives yesterday, and which is described in our report of the proceedings. It is doubtful if any other session has ever been so interesting and so important as this. The House was called to order at 10 o'clock, and the Speaker, Mr. Carlisle, rose to the chair. The first business was the reading of the minutes of the previous day's session. Mr. Carlisle then announced that he had received from the President a copy of the report of the Secretary of the Interior, and that he would read it. The report was then read, and it was found that it contained a number of important provisions. Mr. Carlisle then proposed that the House should pass a resolution in relation to the report. The resolution was then discussed, and it was found that it contained a number of important provisions. Mr. Carlisle then proposed that the House should pass a resolution in relation to the report. The resolution was then discussed, and it was found that it contained a number of important provisions.
