ALEXANDRIA WILL SEEK CAMP AGAIN

Major-General Leonard Wood, in command of the southeastern department, to which Louisiana recently was transferred, is making a round of cities in his department which have put in a bid for the divisional training camp for the conscript army. Sunday he will be in Alexandria to inspect Camp Stafford, and residents of that city are again bestirring themselves to secure the camp.

Dr. Oscar Dowling, of the state board of health, will be in Alexandria for the inspection and will present the claims of this state for a health standpoint. It was chiefly on account of alleged deficiencies in Louisiana health conditions that Little Rock, Ark., has been tentatively selected as a site for the camp.

Shreveport has been an active contender for the camp, and has not yet given up hope. Lake Charles also put in an application, and its proposed site of 10,000 acres southeast of the city was inspected the other day by Major W. J. Guthrie. Major Guthrie's only unfavorable comment was that the site was rather level for the purposes of training an army.

Daughter Wears a Stunning Topcoat

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

For maidens from ten to seventeen years is this three-quarter length coat of wool velveteen cloth in a wide variety of colors—gold, rose, apple green, copen blue or black and white check. Sash belt, soft shawl collar and delectable pockets add the finishing touches to a smart garment.

New trotter boots are of mahogany colored leather, with much perforated trimming and pierced eyelets without metal rims. They give a correct and swagger suggestion with the mannish tailored suit, and, of course, one's gloves are mannish also—of heavy kid—and a sport sallet of milan with simple grosgrain band and bow is the finishing touch.

White soutache braid is being used on white net for collars. These net collars are square, round and pointed in shape.

LADY MAGGABEES ARE FOR SUFFRAGE

The following resolutions were unanimously passed at an official meeting held in New Orleans Monday by the New Orleans Review No. 5:

"Whereas, in this great world's struggle for human liberty all of our allies are enchanting their women; and

"Whereas, the President of the United States, in his war proclamation, has called on both the men and the women of these United States to serve the colors; and

"Whereas, we are assured from day to day that the ultimate success of this war lies in the hands of women; and

"Whereas, the women have shown their willingness and determination to serve their country; and

"Whereas, our national body, the Woman's Benefit Association of the Macabees has already indorsed the Susan B. Anthony amendment; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we women of New Orleans Review No. 5 of the Woman's Benefit Association of the Macabees do hereby indorse the Susan B. Anthony amendment for the national enfranchisement of women; and call upon President Wilson and both houses of Congress to pass at the present session of Congress as war measure this amendment; and

"Be it further resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to the President of the United States; to the Louisiana delegation in the senate and house; to the chairman of the woman's suffrage committee in the senate; the chairman of the judiciary committee in the house; that Senator Ransford be instructed to have his resolutions read into the record of the senate, and that Representative Garland Dupre be instructed to have them read into the record of the house.

The supreme commander of the Woman's Benefit Association of the Macabees, Miss Bina West of Port Huron, Mich., is an ardent suffragist.

NO STATEMENT FROM LOCAL FIRM

No statement would be made at the New Orleans offices of J. Aron & Co., Inc., coffee importers, in regard to the seizure of 12,000 bags of coffee by a London prize court. The court held that the shipment was intended for Germany, and, therefore, seized it.

A prize court was named with Sir Samuel T. Evans as president, and after trial the contention of the crown was upheld and the coffee has been condemned, the court, in passing judgment, making the statement that it is surprising that Aron & Co. should make statements, such as the firm is said to have made, under oath.

Aron & Co., Inc., have made tremendous strides in business in the past six years, and today are recognized as probably the largest importing and exporting firm in the United States. Its principal offices are at New York, where J. Aron, the president, resides. In New Orleans the offices are at 416 Poydras street. The concern's export trade is done through New York and New Orleans. It also maintains offices in Brazil and does business through agencies in Europe.

A recent statement made by the New York offices contended that the firm has not done business in the Far East since 1915, when only 8,000 bags were shipped, and that the firm's agent was instructed at that time to do business only with Russia and Scandinavia. It is evidently this statement to which the president of the prize court refers in passing judgment on the case.

BEARS RAID CANADIAN PIGS AND POULTRY

Nelson, B. C., June 28.—Black bears are raiding the farming districts in this vicinity. One big bear entered a pigsty, killed a porker and ate part of the carcass. Two other bears were seen near by, but were frightened away. A rancher killed a large black bear in his orchard on the outskirts of the town. Pigs and poultry have been missed by many farmers.

Humiliation of that gallant but over-trusting officer, With the army and the reservists at his back Constantine might at any moment have attacked the allied rear in Macedonia. Such a diversion might have had an important bearing on the issue of the war. He might have persuaded the greater part of his people that this course was necessary to the maintenance of Greek liberties.

CONSTANTINE IS PIG-HEADED AND STIFF-NECKED, BUT NO WEAKLING

By HERBERT COREY.

Washington.—King Constantine's "abdication" was an abdication under duress. The Allies had him by the scruff of the neck. It had more of an outward aspects of an eviction.

The chief fault to be found with it is that it came two years too late. If he had been tossed out of his throne upon his hard head when the Allies first began their campaign in the East a different situation would have resulted.

Bulgaria might not have entered the war. Rumania might have been saved. Turkey's hundreds of thousands of hard fighting men would have been cut off from their present-day allies in the Central Powers.

His deposition at this late day was the one way of repairing the damage resulting from stupid diplomacy. The immediate result is the military occupation of Greece. A secondary result will be the creation of a Greek army which will fight for the Allies and the ridding the allies' rear in Macedonia of the menace that has been constant since action began there.

To understand the action in Greece two facts must be clearly borne in mind.

One is that the Greeks have been pro-peace rather than pro-Ally.

The other is that Constantine has been their hero. Unless the situation has altered materially since March, he is the most popular man in Greece.

Believed Germany Would Win His plan, so far as the outside could read it, was to keep his people out of the war until they could enter at a profit. He believed that profit would be found upon the German side, for he always insisted the Germans could not be defeated.

Obviously this situation could not be tolerated indefinitely. Pressure of every sort was brought to bear on "Tino" and his people, but the king and his army maintained a growling and dangerous neutrality, while the people as a whole composed unbounded confidence in their king.

Meanwhile the Greeks have been suffering greatly because of the allied blockade. It is entirely probable that the matter how warmly they hoped to keep the peace they would have followed the king and tailored suit, and, of course, one's gloves are mannish also—of heavy kid—and a sport sallet of milan with simple grosgrain band and bow is the finishing touch. The sporty trotter boot is not correct, however, with an afternoon costume, which demands the dainty buttoned boot, high of heel and with a top of contrasting fabric.
