Texas Governor Fights A. and M. College of Texas

The University of Texas may be forced to close its doors because the governor of that state has refused to allow any appropriations for the university for the next two years. The governor declares the university is a school for rich men's sons and daughters, and that he will not tolerate it any longer. Some people are going "hog wild" over education, he says.

The governor of Texas is James E. Ferguson. Texans call him Jim, Governor Jim. His career has been remarkable. He is a self-made man. He rose from cowpuncher and lumber jack to the governor's chair.

Governor Ferguson was born in Texas, on a farm. After a common school education he started out to make his own way. He drifted about the West doing any work that a raw farm boy could do. He farmed, punched cows, worked in mines and on wharves as a laborer and as a lumber jack in the woods of the Pacific Northwest.

Becomes a Lawyer
It was while holding down a job on a railway bridge, gave a number of years later he heard the call of the farm. He went back to the country he was born in and began growing cotton. One day while in town with a load of cotton to sell he met a former school friend who was then an attorney.

"Jim," said his friend, "why don't you become a lawyer?"

"Lord it requires brains, to be a lawyer," Ferguson replied.

"No," the young attorney answered. "The main thing is to have a license and to back it up with nerve. I made four thousand this year. You can do as well."

Two years later James E. Ferguson hung out his shingle in practice in the courts. While waiting for practice he did a collection business in a small way. His business grew and in a short time he had organized and become head of a small bank. As a banker he prospered. He married and more success came to him. He became known as Farmer Ferguson, Landlord Ferguson and Ranchman Ferguson. "Farmer Jim" it was not "Banker Jim." Tired of accumulating money at 43, he determined to enter public life. He did not begin by running for mayor. He headed for the governorship.

His campaign was quick and decisive. Cheaper money for farmers and a law to restrict the amount of rent a landlord could charge a tenant farmer were the main planks in his platform. He is a marvelous campaigner. One of the shirt-sleeve type who can lead a hand at the plowing, if opportunity offers, and drink from a gourd cup as though used to it. The tenant farmers rallied to his standard. Contributions to his campaign fund began to come in. He returned them all with thanks. He was spending his own money, he said.

His Victory Decisive
The result was overwhelming. Ex-Senator Joseph W. Bailey, who was said to hold the votes of the state in his hand, announced that he would wipe Ferguson off the map. Ex-Senator Bailey is now in political oblivion. Governor Ferguson is serving his second term.

The governor hadn't been in office long until "business" began to pick up. Some say he has been a good governor; others deny it. An attempt to impeach him was made last March. The proceedings alleged that the governor misappropriated public funds from the legislative appropriations for maintenance of the executive mansion by purchasing items for personal use and charging the same to the state. The governor was exonerated by a legislative committee. Now the university question is stirring the state.

Pleas of time to time during the last two years it is said the governor has eluded the university management with dishonestly, extravagance and misapplication of funds; the faculty of being "two-bit thieves" and liars; the student body of disloyalty, treason and snobbishness; that he has found more corruption in the University of Texas than in all other departments of the government; that the university is full of disloyalty; that it is a rich man's school and that it is robbing the people.

Doesn't Like "Frats"
Friends of the university are fighting back. They say the trouble is personal. The governor has demanded that the board of regents dismiss members of the faculty, including the president, they assert, and will not ask the legislature for a thorough investigation of the university and its management. The students and faculty of the University petitioned the legislature to make a full investigation of all matters pertaining to the university. While these requests were pending before the senate the governor advised it that he "did not consider further investigation necessary."

A definite campaign against the governor has been organized. Supporters of the school fear that an agreement between the governor and the board of regents will allow the school to continue on the issue of emergency warrants with the governor's approval, thus allowing the state executive to do as he pleases with the school. The governor does not like college fraternities, they say. As matters stand now the university cannot open next fall.

POSTPONED BALL GIVEN THURSDAY
The dance of the girls of the junior auxiliary for the Washington archery which was to have been given last Saturday night at the Casino at City park was postponed because of rain, will be given tomorrow night at the same place. Two hundred tickets will be sold at 50 cents each. The money derived from the dance will be devoted to buying comforts for the soldiers.

The committee in charge consists of the following: Mr. Edouard Lier and Misses Gretchen LeBelle, Ruth Hardy, Julia Pratt, Marcelle Couturier, Genevieve Owen, Helen Garrison, Lawrence Gray, Lydia Becker, Pearl Kavendick and Lucille Johnson.

CANT ENJOY YOU FROM YELLING 'SCAB'
By International News Service.
Springfield, Ill., July 10. You can yell "Scab!" as loud and as long as you want to, the State Supreme Court ruled in an opinion accompanying a decision, even though you are restrained from so doing by injunction.

The high tribunal pointed out that the word "Scab" was defined by Webster as "a workman who works for lower wages than those prescribed by labor unions," and hence has a fixed and definite meaning.

"It's part of your constitutional right to free speech," the court said.

UNCLE SAM'S DAILY FOOD ECONOMY HINT

Milk Toast
Don't throw away stale bread and left-over skim milk, Madam Housewife. From them you can make that simple and well-known nourishing dish, milk toast, the United States department of agriculture points out. This makes a good dish for breakfast, luncheon or supper, especially for children.

Beat the milk. Add a quantity of butter and season to taste with salt. Pour while hot over well-toasted stale bread and serve.

TWO CITIES FAIL TO HAVE PARKS

Washington, July 10. All but two of the 213 American cities of over 30,000 population own certain areas specifically set aside as public parks.

This fact is brought out in a report issued by the census bureau of the department of commerce, following an investigation by Starke M. Crogan.

The national capital has by far the largest number of breathing areas, but New York has a larger per acreage. New York has about twenty square miles in parks.

Other cities with large park areas are Philadelphia, with 5,500 acres; Los Angeles, with 4,127 acres; Chicago, with 3,815 acres; Denver, with 3,719 acres; Washington, D. C., with 3,067 acres, and Minneapolis, with 3,038 acres.

Greatest Park Area
The greatest area of parks and other public grounds inside city limits in proportion to population—one acre for each fourteen inhabitants—is shown for Quincy, Mass.

Other cities reporting more than an acre to each 100 inhabitants are San Diego, Cal., with 20 inhabitants per acre of parks and recreation grounds; La Crosse, Wis., with 43; Council Bluffs, Ia., with 45; Lynn, Mass., with 52; Sioux city, Ia., with 61; Harrisburg, Pa., with 77; Hartford, Conn., with 81; Niagara Falls, N. Y., with 87; Washington, D. C., with 97, and Covington, Ky., with 99.

Many Athletic Fields
A total of nineteen athletic fields exclusive of those located in parks, with an average area of a little less than eight acres, were reported by thirteen cities, four by Detroit, Mich.; three by Sacramento, Cal.; two by Hoboken, N. J., and one each by the remaining ten cities.

Facilities for games and athletics in parks, playgrounds and athletic fields were maintained by 173 cities.

Swimming pools and bathing beaches were provided by 111 cities, whose total facilities in this respect comprised 117 outdoor swimming pools, 61 indoor swimming pools and 149 bathing beaches, at which the aggregate attendance during the year was more than 26,000,000.

Museums and art galleries were administered by thirty-three cities, and in seventeen cities such institutions were under private administration, but received municipal aid.

The expenditures for recreation purposes (excluding outlays) in cities of over 30,000 inhabitants during the fiscal year 1916 aggregated $21,637,097, or 67 cents per capita. The greatest per capita expenditures under this head which are shown for any one city were reported by Brookline, Mass., $3.68.
